IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving memory of Harry W. Jarrell, my husband and our daddy who passed away Dec. 11, 1962.

Just one lonely year ago today,
The Death Angel came and took the dearest
One in all the world away.
We cannot call Him back, Thy purpose see.
All is well that's done by Thee.
A happy home we once enjoyed,
How sweet the memory still.
But Death has left a loneliness this World can never fill.
If we had all this world to give
We'd give it, yes and more,
Just to see his sweet face and hear his loving voice and meet him at the door.
Often to his grave we wonder,
Place some flowers with loving care.
We feel that he is near us, as we sadly linger there.
Sadly missed by wife and children. 12-12-1p

"Gentlemen: Your letter regarding titles received. I note you wish titles to extend further than I have presented them.

"I was unaware that any educated man in the world failed to know that Louisiana was purchased by the United States from France in 1803. The title to the land was acquired by France by right of conquest from Spain. The land came into possession of Spain by right of discovery made in 1492 by a Spanish-Portuguese sailor named Christopher Columbus, who had been granted the privilege of seeking a new route to India by the then-reigning Monarch, Queen Isabella.

"The good queen, being a pious woman and careful about titles (almost as careful, I might say, as the RFC), took the precaution of securing the blessing of the Pope of Rome upon the voyage before she sold her jewels to help Columbus.

"Now the Pope, as you know, is the emmisary of Jesus Christ, who is the Son of God, and God, it is commonly accepted, made the world. Therefore, I believe, it is safe to assume that He also made that part of the United States called Louisiana — and I hope to hell you're satisfied."

Faith To Share

Lesson for December 15, 1963

All religions are shared religions. That is, if in any religious group large or small, the notion got around that the best thing you can do with your faith is to keep it a kind of happy secret between yourself and God then that religion would vanish from among mankind in less than a hundred years. Religions persist from generation to generation because those who are religious share their faith with other people.

But religions differ in their answer to this question: With whom do you share your faith, or with whom are you expected to share it? Some share their faith with their children only. You cannot, for instance, become a convert to the religion of the Parsees, not even by marrying one. Only the children of Parsees are accepted. Other religions share their faith within definite geographical bounds, or racial limits. The Christian religion is one of the very few which its possessors are expected to share with all men high and low, all men of all colors and races and conditions in life, all human beings all over this globe.

You can't call this sharing

If you are a Christian, then, you have a faith to share . . . that is, if you have faith. You can't share the money your grandfather had and spent. You can't share enthusiasm you haven't got, you can't share your grandmother's faith, hope or love. YOU can share what YOU, have, not what somebody else has. You can pass on ideas without believing them yourself, though they won't be very convincing; but you can't pass on faith you don't have yourself.

But there are two ways in which people, who do have some genuine personal religious faith, try to share it, without success. One wrong way is to force it on other people. In the Middle Ages the church used to conduct some strange evangelistic campaigns. They would get the police to round up a dozen or so Jews, the Jews would be tied together and taken to church and made to listen to a Christian" preaching for a number of Sundays, and then they would take those Jews out and duck them in the fountain in the public square, by way of Christian baptism. Then they would chalk it up in their statistics — so many Jews converted this year. No, there were no converts by that route. Forcing religion is like forcing food; it's not sharing.

Sharing by talking

For all that, talking about our faith is one way to share it. Take the Apostle Paul for example. He preached, he taught, he visited from house to house. He wrote letters, more than a dozen of which have been preserved in the New Testament. He was one of the greatest talkers-for-Christ known to history. There is a difference between talking about our faith in such a bragging way as the Pharisees had, and talking about it in humble but radiant enthusiasm as Paul always did. A Pharisee might thank God he was not as other men; a converted Pharisee, such as Paul could say to a king: "I wish you were in my place — only without these chains."

Sharing by living

It's very doubtful whether any one ever became a sure-enough Christian without living for a while with a real Christian. Most of us are not converted by something we read, first of all. It's rather by what we have seen and heard. Christianity is life, not a theory. Everything that is Christian, which is to say every Christian truth and grace, is in a person before it is in a book. Jesus Christ came before any books were written about him. Christianity is not something you can cut into slices and pass around like cake. Christianity is like enthusiasm which must has to be caught rather than taught. There is no such thing as Christianity that's not in people. And an unsharing, ungrieving, selfish life can never share a warm and joyful faith. It comes back to where we started: You can share only what you have.

Pastor Speaks

CHRISTMAS ROSES — Dr. N. E. Laccock, columnist, minister, writer and lecturer, under the pen name of Simeon Stylias takes from the criminal Syrian pillar-sitter and first world columnist who set on the column for 30 years, has written a book called "Living Without Gloves." In his book he has one article called "Christmas Roses."

In it he describes to the amazement of the passer-by Roses growing up out of the cement sidewalk. This he used to exclaim something of the stunned Shepherds of the Judean hillsides when the heavenly hosts announced that a Saviour had been born. They were "Sore afraid.' Stunned with astonishment, the whole affair was fantastic. The "things that cannot be are."

How seedy we need the ability to wonder! Our world is filled with facts and figures, information and entertainment. We have an unceasing parade of novelties, and a rapidity growing state world. Our push - button society is growing more frantic every day. By time Christmas leave us exasperated. In the true shepherd manner we need to see the fantastic, "The things that cannot be are."

Mary, when informed by a messenger from another world that she was going to be the channel through whom the Saviour was to come into the world, "pondered these things in her heart", (Luke 2:19. Truly, here is coming up out of the sidewalk, Roses.

The spirit of the Shepherds brings us back to reality also. That something fantastic is happening. Christmas knocks the world of order topsy - turvy. Everything is gloriously out of place, a song in the sky, a baby in the stable. Breath - taking— the astonishment of Christmas!

These ancient Shepherds "went to Bethlehem to worship and give gifts." They returned to their chores with iron in their spiritual veins; for a Saviour, a Deliverer, the Head of a new race, Spiritual Israel, had been born. Truly a Rose had come up out of the cracks, an astonishing thing had taken place.

It would do eachof us good to capture somethin= of the unusual from this event in history, the Birth of our Lord. For indeed it is unusual that God would "take upon himself the form of a servant and to be made in the likeness of man." (Phil. 2:7) This he did in the coming of Christ. It is no wonder that all Heaven would announce and declare such an event. Let us hope that in th emidst of the utter desperation of THINGS, we shall find the breath-taking vision of the invading into history, the Divine One Himself God coming in human form."

A little boy was riding with his parents during the Christmas season by an unfinished skyscraper. He suddenly exclaimed, "Daddy, Bethlehem is written all over the steel." With the freshness of the Christmas Story on his mind, he was able to capture something of the amazement of it.
